About Jump! Jump! Jump! Stacey

Playing outside, Stacey resists coming indoors to take a nap. She would much rather jump or dance or twirl. Young readers will enjoy all of Stacey's actions, eventually leading to slumberland. Parents will surely recognize the struggle to get a young child to take a nap. (Hint: if your child does these movements, they'll wear themselves out and be more inclined to lay down like Stacey eventually does.)

This is the second book featuring Stacey. The first, Stacey Became a Frog One Day,* was published in October 2020.

About Candelaria Norma Silva

Candelaria writes stories, essays and blog posts inspired by her upbringing in the rich Southern soil of a large extended family in St. Louis, Missouri. She remembers learning to read after being plopped into first grade knowing only the alphabet and colors.

Soon becoming an insatiable reader, young Candelaria checked out as many books as possible from the neighborhood library each week. She still loves to read, with special affection for reading and collecting children's books that portray children of color.

At an early age, writing chose Candelaria. Writing provides a way to celebrate her family and community. Her experiences as a child, a mother, and a grandmother have given this author many stories to write!

Candelaria lives in the Dorchester community in Boston, Massachusetts, with her husband where she is active, through consulting and board service, in arts, community-outreach, libraries, and philanthropy. She looks forward to long summer "take-over" visits from her grandchildren.
